Job Training Funds Support 120 New Trainees

Meat processing, gourmet foods, manufacturing among new jobs supported by JTIP

SANTA FE, N.M. – Nine companies were awarded funding for a total of 120 new trainees during the July meeting of the Job Training Incentive Program (JTIP) Board, Economic Development Department Cabinet Secretary Alicia J. Keyes announced today.

Five of the JTIP applications were for new funding and four were amendments to previously awarded amounts, due to high rate of job expansion. The average wage of trainees at the July 17 meeting was $19 an hour.

New jobs were created in industries everywhere from gourmet foods to engine manufacturing. Companies receiving JTIP funds show the growing diversification of the New Mexico economy, an important factor in healthy economic growth, especially during recovery from COVID-19 health emergency.

"These are good-paying jobs from a successful state program I have pushed hard to expand and improve," Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham said. "Workers in our state deserve every opportunity to get in the door, to get ahead, and to have stable fulfilling opportunities. I will continue to fight for that every single day."

"New Mexico has a robust pipeline of businesses looking to expand in the state and relocate here," Cabinet Secretary Keyes said. "We know JTIP and other assistance helps businesses bring new and higher paying employees on board, sooner and with more confidence."

JTIP funds classroom and on-the-job training for new jobs in expanding or relocating businesses for up to 6 months. The program reimburses 50-75% of employee wages. These trainees can be new employees, or those currently employed looking for higher-wage promotions. These funds are specifically set aside by the Legislature each year and can only be used for the purpose of the JTIP program.
