JTIP Funds Approved for 11 Companies in February

Job Training Funds Allow Companies to Hire and Train More New Mexico Workers

SANTA FE, N.M. – Job Training Incentive Program (JTIP) funds for February have been awarded to 11 companies in support of 61 new employees, 3 paid interns, and training for 38 incumbent workers, Economic Development Cabinet Secretary Alicia J. Keyes announced today.

The strength of JTIP is that it can be used by companies of different sizes across New Mexico, with rural/frontier businesses receiving a higher percentage of costs refunded, which infuses dollars into the economy where it is needed most. JTIP also offers a higher percentage award for companies offering high-wage jobs, encouraging growth in the sectors that will best offer the jobs of the future. The program also allows for companies to grow their number of employees incrementally, applying multiple times to continue growth at their own pace.

"Companies are utilizing JTIP as a way to keep expanding their employee base, even if they only need a few positions," EDD Secretary Keyes said. "It's heartening to know that JTIP helps businesses of all sizes in all parts of the state, assisting them so they can hire New Mexicans as they expand and create jobs."
