The New Mexico Outdoor Ventures collaboration is designed to elevate the voices and experiences of New Mexico’s diverse outdoor recreation community with authentic storytelling.

“The outdoor recreation industry is increasing economic prosperity while improving the health and wellness of New Mexicans,” New Mexico Economic Development Department Cabinet Secretary-Designate Rob Black said. “We are excited to celebrate and support our hardworking and resilient entrepreneurs in the outdoor industry.”

From outfitters and guides to gear makers and adventure hosts, the featured businesses span the state, representing a broad range within the outdoor industry. Through a compelling mix of photography and narrative, New Mexico Outdoor Ventures encourages residents and visitors to discover new ways to engage with New Mexico’s outdoors and support the outdoor recreation economy.

“We’re excited to bring these inspiring stories to light and give recognition to the entrepreneurs and creators who are driving New Mexico’s outdoor economy,” ORD Director Karina Armijo said. “This project not only celebrates the beauty of our landscapes but also highlights the individuals and businesses who help others experience the outdoors in meaningful ways.”

Governor Michelle Lujan Grisham has identified outdoor recreation as a key sector to grow and diversify New Mexico’s economy. In 2019, the governor signed New Mexico’s Outdoor Recreation Division into law, housing it within the Economic Development Department. Since then, ORD has invested over $1 million in small businesses through its Outdoor Marketing Grant, Outdoor Recreation Business Accelerator Grant, annual Adventure Pitch startup pitch competition, and ActivatOR Outdoor Recreation Growth Accelerator program.
